FIFTY-FOUR MILES AN HOUR.
That Is the Rate of the Gale Off Sandy Hook To-Day.

A hurricane that found its birth away up in Lake Superior yesterday afternoon has been howling in the vicinity of New York for the past eighteen hours, and from daylight this morning it has been playing havoc with pedestrians generally and sailing craft in particular. It is a veritable sea monster, and its fury has been up to the moment at the rate of forty-six miles an hour.

An aggravating rain storm has been keeping the disturbing factor company.

The wires have come in for a share of the general inconvenience, and there is a great delay in the morning over the Western Union and other lines in the transmission of telegraphic messages.

According to Sergt. Jesperson, of the Weather Bureau, the storm, after leaving Lake Superior yesterday morning at 2.30 o'clock, with increasing violence, made an onslaught on northern New York, and, spreading southward, it has now centered itself off Portland, Me., where the wind is blowing forty-eight miles an hour.

Off the coast it was met by a freshening breeze from the southwest, which, intensified by the prevailing current in the bay, caused by the forcing storm, served to make the light rain a booming commotion, and together they started the weather seers on the coast from Block Island to Cape Hatteras into hanging out their storm signals.

At 5 o'clock this morning the wind off Sandy Hook was now an off-shore breeze on howling, and the high wind has proved very unfavorable to the shipping in the harbor and on the East and North rivers.

The day, since 5 o'clock this morning, has been one of boiling and seething masses of foam, and with the blowing the entire waterfront in many places has been submerged by the waves that broke over the docks, and a number of cellular along South street received large quantities of water. But the effects of the high wind were perhaps best observed along the coast well on the Battery.

The waves danced furiously and broke over the sea-wall for its entire length. The benches on the promenade alongside the wall were constantly drenched, and rickshaws and other vehicles of all description were left stranded on the walk, whither they had been swept by the waves.

The wind kept pointed dead against the city, and the smaller craft were being blown toward their moorings. The power at harbor tide had all they could do to make progress against the wind, and the entire of sailing ships and other vessels anchored in the bay toward Manhattan at their anchors.

The sound signals were all delayed in getting in this morning, being so completely overpowered by the noise of the waves that they were unable to give out any signal, and even the ferry-boats, which are usually so prompt in their movements, were delayed by the high wind.

A full account of the origin of the storm, said Sergt. Jesperson, to an Evening World reporter, "other than that it came from Lake Superior, I am not prepared to say, but it is very dangerous to shipping and it is likely to bring about the coast. I am present center is about one hundred miles east of Portland and with a lower temperature it will disappear in a night."

The French liner steamship La Normandie arrived from Havre last night, and went up to her pier, having encountered the beginning of the gale off Sandy Hook yesterday evening.
